Samantha's House hosts annual golf tournament

Foundation builds accessible homes for seriously injured Hoosiers

INDIANAPOLIS – Samantha's House Foundation, an Indianapolis-based organization that builds accessible homes for seriously injured Hoosiers, will host its annual golf tournament on Sept. 11 at Highland Golf and Country Club. Organizers are expecting a full field. All proceeds will go directly to benefit Samantha's House beneficiaries.

This fundraising event will feature an announcement about plans for the next house.

"This is one of our biggest fundraising events each year," said James Keller, an Indianapolis lawyer who helped found Samantha's House. "We are thrilled with the response to date, and hope to exceed expectations so we can continue to improve the lives of Hoosier families impacted by serious accidents, illness or other special needs."
